NEW YORK CITY IS FACING FAMINE IN FUEL DUE TO SNOW

Railways Are Blocked By Drifts, Fog Delays The Water Freight

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—While New York shivered today in a 20 degrees above zero weather, in the wake of the heaviest storm of the winter, the city was menaced with the worst fuel crisis in its history.

There are only 48 hours supply of coal on hand and snow has blocked many of the railway lines leading to the freight terminals where fuel is unloaded.

The storm began with a gale which swept all the eastern states but particularly the Atlantic coast. Rain turned to sleet and sleet to snow, thruout the early part of the day, a sixty-mile wind whirled the snow in high drifts. The thermometer fell to 20 degrees above zero.

One man was killed and many other persons were injured.

Railroad and street traffic were badly crippled and thousands of commuters were late for work.

The deep slush which lined the streets froze over, making traffic dangerous. Hospitals were busy caring for persons injured in falls.

Steamship traffic was halted by

HANNAH SAWYER, EARLY RESIDENT OF CITY, IS DEAD

Spent Entire Life Here; Aged Woman Succumbs After Long Illness

After being bedfast at her home since Thanksgiving Day, Mrs. Hannah Sawyer, aged 87, died at 223 south Eighth-st, at 8:30 o'clock Friday morning.

She had been in ill health for a number of months, but not seriously ill until last Thanksgiving Day.

She was born on December 21, 1835 in Coshocton, where she has resided all her life. Mrs. Sawyer had often told the story of how she used to pick berries in her childhood around where her present home is located. In her childhood, the part of town where she lived was a wilderness or thicket.

At the age of 10 years, Mrs. Sawyer, then Miss Hannah Montgomery, united with the Methodist Episcopal church. She was a staunch and devoted Christian all her life. She kept her membership in the M. E. church in this city all her life.

On March 21, 1854 she was married with Mr. Joseph Sawyer, who preceded her to the grave a number of years ago. To this union were born 11 children. Only the following five survive: Mrs. F. H. Hanlon and Frank Sawyer, of Batavia, N. Y.; John Sawyer, of Villa Ridge, Ill.; Mrs. I. C. Dickerson, of Coshocton, and Miss Phillis, of the late home.

The funeral arrangements will be made after word is received from the son at Villa Ridge, the members of the immediate family said Friday afternoon.

WARNS CHARITABLE AGAINST IMPOSTORS

A warning against the impositions of magazine salesmen posing as disabled World war veterans was issued Friday by Commander Walter Sherrets, of the local post, Disabled Veterans of the World [illegible]

There have been men in uniform [illegible] the city at various times disposing of a periodical called "The Service Record" under the pretense that the funds so collected go to help the disabled veterans. This, Sherrets said Friday, is untrue. He added that these men have no credentials from the national organization, and in many instances the men are not even ex-soldiers.

Syracuse University Has "Unkissed Kings"

Thomas G. Lawrence and Frank Culver laid claim to the title of "Unkissed Kings" of Syracuse (N. Y.) University, where they are students. Culver is the Varsity football captain. Culver has lost his crown, however, a dizzy blonde waylaying him on a lonely road and stealing a kiss.

LIQUOR SMUGGLERS BROT BOOZE WORTH TEN MILLIONS HERE

Beverages For Holiday Wk. Flood Distribution Centers Of U. S.

MORE IS ENROUTE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—Liquor smugglers imported at least 100,000 cases of whiskey, worth $10,000,000 at bootleg prices, into the United States in the week just before Xmas, according to government investigators today.

Reports made to treasury and justice department officials disclosed this volume of high voltage beverages had practically reached all chief centers of distribution and was sold to patrons of the bootleggers.

Prohibition officials admitted fleets of ships operated by smugglers have been making safe landings with their cargoes, because the prohibition naval vessels are now confined strictly to within the three mile limit for purposes of seizure. Seldom does the prohibition navy venture beyond American waters for purposes of observation unless flagrant cases are brought to the attention of officials at Washington.

Smugglers have brot most of their stocks thru the coastal gateways. Enormous shipments have

Forty British Vessels And Forty Thousand Of Greek Army Ready To Launch An Offensive In The Near East—Only Success At The Lausanne Parley Can Prevent War

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Eleutherios Venizelos, head of the Greek delegation in the Near East peace conference has warned his government to be ready for a renewal of the war against Turkey, said an Athens dispatch to the Daily Express today.

Greece is putting an army into Thrace, while Venizelos is urging that it be reinforced as rapidly as possible.

The Greek cabinet at Athens has decided to call up additional classes of reservists.

General Oranglos, chief of staff of the Greek forces in Thrace has departed secretly for Salonika.

The new war scare in the Near East has arisen from the deadlock in the peace conference at Lausanne. Neither the Turks nor the allies would give ground with the result that the negotiations have been on the verge of collapse for 48 hours.

Great Britain has massed a great fleet in the Turkish straits between the Black and Aegean seas. Altho diplomatic relations between Greece and Britain were broken off, both nations would make common cause against the Turks. Great Britain could furnish 40 warships of various grades from the Mediterranean fleet, including transports and supply vessels, while Greece could put about 40,000 troops in the field to supplant the 10,000 British troops already in the Near East.

LEGAL FIGHT FOR MATTHEWS CHILD IS ON

Cleveland Woman Files Demurrer To Petition Of Child's Mother

A demurrer to the petition filed by Mary Matthews, asking the probate court to set aside papers giving Margaret Collmer custody of Mrs. Matthew's child, was filed in probate court Friday by Mrs. Collmer of Cleveland.

The defendant, in her demurrer, declares the probate court has no jurisdiction in the case and the plaintiff shows no cause for action. She asks that the plaintiff's petition be dismissed.

The child was adopted by Mrs. Collmer nine years ago when Mrs. Matthews, then Mrs. West, was unable to care for her. In October, 1921, the girl was returned to Mrs. Matthews, and just one year later, while leaving school at the Chestnut-st building, she was kidnapped by Mrs. Collmer and taken to Cleveland.

Charges that Mrs. Collmer is an unfit person to have custody of the girl are made by Mrs. Matthews in her petition for nullification of the adoption papers.

Mrs. Collmer's attorney advises that the probate court must determine the truth of the charge, and even if found true, he claims, the girl could not immediately be returned to Mrs. Matthews, but would have to be placed in a state institution, and then adopted by her real mother, Mrs. Matthews.

A. L. Kreisberg of Cleveland represents Mrs. Collmer.

MARITAL BLISS IS SHORT LIVED

After being married for less than two months, Edith Moore has filed a suit in probate court for a divorce from Earl C. Moore. They were married November 10, 1922.

The plaintiff, in her petition, says that on November 21 the defendant showed her a letter which made known to her that her husband was the father of a child by another woman. She immediately left him, according to the petition.

She also declares the plaintiff has threatened to kill her.

She is represented by L. N. Staats.

FEARS INDEMNITIES

LONDON, Dec. 29 — "Germany should be made to pay war damages to the very utmost of her ability, but beyond that Europe should start with a clean slate."

Snowden, a lame, frail man, is one of the intellectuals among the labor leaders and he is expected to serve as chancellor of the exchequer if a labor government should come into power.

MILLIONAIRE GIVES PLANT AND CAPITAL TO THOSE EMPLOYED

Workers Assume Control Of Large Dressmaking Establishment Today

DIX IS BENEFACTOR

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—The factory run by and for its employes functioned smoothly the first day. It was the plant formerly owned by Henry A. Dix, millionaire employer of New York and Millville, N. J., who announced that he would turn his $1,000,000 a year dress manufacturing business over to the workers as a reward for their faithful service and who put the announcement in effect yesterday.

He reduced his own salary at the same time, from $60,000 to fifty cents annually. He also loaned the employes $250,000 cash capital with which to carry on business. They are to pay for the blocks of stock they receive out of the future profits of the business.

"The solution of the labor problem in the United States is not entirely perhaps, but very largely, in the hands of employers,' Mr. Dix said today.

"And the solution, as I see it, is this: Treat your employes fairly, remember they are just human beings like yourself and that without them your business success would be impossible.

"It is all simple enough when you come to look at it. It is nothing much more than the practical application of the golden rule.

"And with it, in my case, go the love and thoughtfulness for the well being and aid of others as they came from the soul of a woman—my wife, who died three years ago, for it was she who guided and advised me in whatever I have been able to do for the wlefare of others.

"I and my family have been termed 'cranks' heretofore by many business men, large employers of labor themselves, for giving away, as they termed it, money and charitable and educational gifts which have come chiefly thru the earnings of my business.

"In answering them, I have pointed out that unless it had been for those employes, my firm would have made no profits and I would have been in no position to have

Federal Reserve Board Voices Substantiation Of Commerce Secretary's Statement, Pointing To Increases In Production And Employment And Advancing Prices—Coal Alone Shows Slump

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—Business and industry in the United States, approaching the beginning of the new year, can regard the progress of the past months with satisfaction and may look forward to continued prosperity during the early part of 1923, Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover declared today.

He pointed out, however, that "unsettled conditions in foreign countries, particularly in Europe are still depressing our trade, and to a certain extent have kept the prices of agricultural products below the level of other commodities.

The optimism voiced by Secretary Hoover was echoed by the federal reserve board in calling attention to increases in production and employment, greater volume of trade and advancing prices during the month of November.

These price increases during the last two months were also noted by the commerce department with reference to the depression resulting from economic chaos abroad.

Production of manufactured commodities in 1922 was approximately 50 per cent greater than in 1921, according to figures compiled by the commerce department from reports to the census bureau.

Textile mills were about twenty per cent more active than in 1921, the iron and steel industry increased its output from 60 to 70 per cent, while other production gains were noted as follows:

Non-ferrous metals 50 to 95 per cent; petroleum 15 per cent; coke 40 per cent; paper 20 to 30 per cent; rubber 40 per cent; automobiles 50 per cent; building construction 50 per cent; lumber 35

FEAR OF PROSECUTION LEADS BASTROP KLANSMEN TO BURN ROBES AND SWEAR SECRECY

BASTROP, La., Dec. 29—Disintegration of the local branch of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan thru fear of wholesale arrests and prosecution of members as the result of a governmental and state investigation into the kidnapping and murder of Watt Daniels and Thos. F. Richards last August was the gist of reports which ran rampant today thru all Morehouse parish.

The reports had it that the klansmen of this parish have disrobed at the orders of Exalted Cyclops J. K. Skipworth and that the members have agreed to keep locked behind their own lips the identity of every member.

Persons who once spoke freely of "100 per cent Americanism" are now silent and attempt to command a bland expression when asked concerning persons who are said to have taken the law into their own hands so far as Morehouse parish is concerned. These persons were much too liberal in their threats of thrashings and warnings to "leave this community immediately."

One prominent planter of this district, closely concerned with activities of the Klan stated that

The Bootlegger's Bad Ways and Big Profits

The lazy and dreamy old Nassau that in other days traded in sponges and tropical fruits, is to-day a busy commercial center. The sponge-baths are now used as the small craft of the smugglers to reach the South Atlantic coast of the United States, while vessels of all sizes that range from sea-going tugs to a converted Spanish battle-cruiser, carry the cargoes of rum to New York and the New England coast. In the bar-rooms, at the dining-tables, in the lobbies and on the porches of the hotels and boarding-houses at Nassau, the capital city of the Bahama Islands, the bootleggers and whisky smugglers "talk of their plans, tell of their profits and laugh at Uncle Sam." There, according to Frank K. Dolan, who went to the Bahamas to study the rum-runners's methods for the New York Daily News, "a man is either 'right' or 'queer.'" If a stranger is suspected of being "queer"—thought to be a revenue officer, a detective, or some one likely to interfere with the rum-smugglers' operations—"he is curtly told to leave town, and in some instances blackjacked and beaten."

In THE LITERARY DIGEST this week, December 30th, there is an informative and interesting account of the methods and operations of the whisky smugglers.

DAILY NEWS LETTER

General News and Gossip from Staff Writers At Home and Abroad

By DAVID M. CHURCH

LONDON, Jan. 29—Parliament is flirting with the delicate subject of raising its own salary.

Members of the House of Commons at present draw 400 pounds annually in salary, an amount equivalent to less than $2,000, and there is a general opinion that this should be raised to at least 1,000 pounds a year, or approximately $5,000.

Although the present salary hardly pays the expenses of a member of the House of Commons, there is some reluctance on the part of the leaders to increase their own salaries at the present time, when there is grave unrest throughout the country because of unemployment.

Any move to increase salaries of commoners will probably meet with opposition from members of the Labor party, who will urge that at a time when thousands of men are walking the streets without work Parliament can ill afford to spend the nation's money in increased legislative salaries. This will afford a real test of the sincerity of the Labor members, too, because of all members the Laborites are as a rule less able to live upon their salaries. The great majority of the Labor members are men who have given up their trades and businesses in order to serve in the House of Commons, and they find they are scarcely able to live upon their salaries. Many of them have given up all attempts at fulfilling some of the requisites of Members of Parliament, particularly those aged old customs with regard to dress. Ramsay MacDonald, the Labor leader, appears in Commons garbed in a baggy tweed suit and offers a striking ocntrast to Bonar Law, who generally wears a cutaway coat with the customary striped trousers.

The Labor members of the House of Commons, as well as many other members who are "new poor," really need an increase in salary, but it is doubtful whether they will take it until the present unemployment distress has been relieved.

Ambassodar Harvey gave London a thrill when he first came to London by driving a flivver, but he in turn gets a thrill every time there is a state procession and he sees the parade of state coaches used by various dignitaries and ambassadors.

George M. Cohan is going to appear in London in one of his own plays and his first appearance is being awaited with considerable interest. Particular interest attaches to the reception Cohan will get from the London critics, who haven't seen any of his work for some time. Of late the London critics have been very harsh with American dramatists and actors, and have spared no efforts to convince the people of their fair foggy city that nothing good in the theatre can ever be expected to come out of America. "Ragtime is the only art the Americans have," the London critics claim, and it remains to be seen whether even George M. Cohan can show them wares which they will have to applaud. American motion pictures make wonderful progress in London, probably because British pictures are so wretched, but American drama has hard sledding, and the critics will applaud a most mediocre British production, while a good American production is thoroughly dissected and dissected with a good deal of venom, too.

The ice is broken. All England seems to be writing for the magazines and newspapers now. The introduction of American dollars into the coffers of English literary agents is probably responsible. England long knew that the Americans werent very careful of their money, but they never dreamed that they would pay good money for written words so easily. Now the discovery has been made, almost everybody in England who has ever had his picture in the papers feels qualified to write upon any subject in the world and to offer it to American newspapers at fabulous prices.

BIG LOC'MOTIVE HELPS TRAINS ON GRADES

Powerful Electric Locomotive Is Forerunner Of Electric Line Over Alleghenies

EQUALS 2 ENGINES

Freight Cars Are Crushed Like Paper Boxes when Forward Engine Fails To Stop

By PAUL H. EGOLF

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 28.—As a forerunner of future electrification of the heavily graded main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad over the Alleghenies, one of the largest electric locomotives for freight service in the world is being tested out by the road on the stiff grades between Philadelphia and Paoli, Pa.

The locomotive was built in the company's own shops to the design of their engineers and develops a tractive effort of 87,200 pounds, which makes it necessary to use it only as a "pusher." If it pulled a train it would jerk the drawbar couplings out of the cars with its tremendous strength.

An idea of its power can be gained from the fact that it frequently takes the place of two steam pusher engines. Its trials have not been without their humorous features, due to the immense tractive effort. Recently, while pushing a freight train near Narberth, Pa., the steam locomotive at the head of the train stopped for a danger signal. The big electric engine however, did not receive the "stop" indication in time, with the result that three freight cars were crushed like accordions before its brakes took hold. On other occasions it has squeezed cars out of trains on sharp curves when the steam engine at the front of the train was not pulling hard enough.

The locomotive operates on a single phase current of 11,000 volts 25 cycles, through an overhead trolley. It has four motors, developing a total of 4,800 horsepower. There are six driving axles, with 72-inch wheels, and two speeds at which it operates—10 and 20 miles an hour. The huge cab mounted above the runing gear is 72½ feet long and ten feet wide.

BERLIN MAN SENDS PROXY TO PRISON

Ruse Discovered and Both He And His Sacrificing Helper Get Longer Terms

BERLIN, Dec. 29—Having been sentenced to one month's imprisonment, John Grienat, a Berlin tailor, violently disliking the idea of losing his personal freedom, persuaded his assistant, Charles Bernick, to go to jail "by proxy." A new suit of clothes was agreed upon as a fitting compensation.

Accompanied by Mrs. Grienat, the young man, equipped, with the identification papers of his boss, presented himself at the prison office on the appointed day. After a well-acted lachrymose scene of farewell from his supposed spouse, the substitute prisoner was taken to his cell.

All during his month's term the grateful boss supplied him amply with food packages. Everything had gone well when on the very day of his dismissal Bernick had the bad luck of running into an acquaintance in the warden's office who hailed him by his real name.

The fraud was discovered. Grienat was sentenced to nine months and his unlucky "proxy" had to spend another five months on top of the one of voluntary imprisonment.

FLYING NOW SAFE, SAYS KEITH SMITH

Noted British Flier Says Law Should Regulate Planes And Aviators

By ELLIS H. MARTIN

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 29.—Flying is now a recognized method of transportation and as safe as any other under proper conditions.

This is the opinion of Sir Keith Smith, noted British aviator, who, with his brother, the late Sir Ross Smith, made the first England to Australia flight and who will next Spring attempt a round the world flight.

"There should be stringent laws dealing with both the machines and the qualifications and training of the pilots," he declared when here recently making arrangements for oil and petrol stations in the Aleutian Islands and Alaska for his round the world flight.

"It is vitally important that the machines used for air transportation shall be right basically and mechanically," he added, "and likewise vitally essential that the pilots' training shall be complete and broad enough to cover all conditions. If the machines and pilots are right practically all of the hazard is taken from flying, and it is the coming method of transportation. In Europe the London-Paris and other continental lines are now accepted successes. In the United States the air mail service is a step in the right direction. It will demonstrate the commercial possibilities of air lines in this great continent.

World Flight Easy.

According to Sir Keith, the apparently difficult task of flying around the world is, after all, a simple one.

"It is largely a matter of ground organization," he declared. "I have just come from China and Japan, where I made all ground arrangements for my flight through those countries. The arrangements made for the Australian trip two years ago will be duplicated on my round the world flight as far as Siam. There, instead of flying to Australia, I will turn northward, skirting the Chinese coast and Japan to the Aleutian Islands.

"Such details as petrol and oil supply bases, spare part depots, landing places and flight distances are all worked out in advance. I believe in preparing for all contingencies. Then come what may I am prepared.

"I always carry approximately a 200 mile supply of oil and petrol in excess of my expected flight distance. Then if I am forced out of my way I have a reserve. Likewise emergency provisions are always on board. However, I do not aim to carry any excess weight. If anything can be left behind it is dispensed with.

"For the trip across the Pacific (the first time it has been attempted) I will carry about two weeks' condensed provisions — chocolate, milk cubes and bottles for hot drinks."

Scorns Heated Suit.

Sir Keith, who is a noted war aviator, has never worn one of the electrically heated aviation suits affected by some aviators and does not plan to do so on his round the world flight. They are too heavy and cumbersome, he said.

His plane will be equipped with a radio set and radio directional finding set. By getting into communication with two radio stations while in flight or while resting on the water—his plan is amphibian—he can get his location. He can also communicate with passing ships while in the air to ascertain position or weather information.

The Japanese and Chinese Governments are enthusiastic in assisting in plans for the round the world flight, the aviator reported.

He may do quite a bit of night flying on the 23,000-mile flight.

"All I need for night flying is a full moon," he said.

Sir Keith is now investigating the feasibility of crossing the Atlantic via Greenland, Iceland and Scotland. He plans to use this route in completing his round the world flight if reports on conditions are favorable.

"The Bricks Of The New Party"

THE following comment on the recent meeting in Cleveland for "progressive political action," taken from the current issue of The Nation is not only interesting, but the keenest analysis of that conference we have yet seen. This comment entitled "The Bricks Of The New Party," contains considerable food for thot and is as follows:

"It looks as if someone had dumped a wagonload of brick on the sidewalk, but no one knows whether it will be built into a church or a pig-sty"—that was one delegate's apt summing-up after the Cleveland session of the Conference for Progressive Political Action. The material was there for an effective third party frankly based upon a union of the producing classes, but the master-artisans hesitated to start building. They were not sure what sort of a building they wanted to build. The result may be that some dark night their bricks will be stolen.

There was no hymn-singing in this conference, no sense of battling at Armageddon. If there had been, the conference anthem would have had to be: "We don't know where we're going, but we're on our way." The delegates were farmers and union officers who were scared by any hint of socialism, or even of a forward-looking economic philosophy, who shuddered at the phrase "class consciousness," but who had a profound conviction that Wall Street was in the saddle and that the only way out was for labor and the farmers to get together and elect their own men. That, after all, is the kind of vague revolt out of which political movements are built. The pity of it was that these men did not have the wider vision which effective leadership will require.

Of course there were other reasons why these delegates wanted to move slowly. The railroad men who dominated the conference love Robert La Follette, and they wanted to go slowly about a third party until they were sure that there was no chance of making "Bob" the Republican candidate for President in 1924. Also, just before this conference William Z. Foster had held a successful "amalgamation conference" of local railroad unions in Chicago, which was greatest among the defeated shopmen, and frightened many of the older trade-union leaders. They were not quite sure what an out-and-out labor party might hold in store for them.

Hence, in part, the rigidity of their tactics at Cleveland. They opened the conference by refusing to seat the Communist delegates—which inevitably caused a fight and gave the handful of Communists far more prominence than they would have had among the delegates on the floor. They continued by attempting to steamroller thru a modest program which omitted all mention of coal, child labor, amnesty, civil liberties, or even injunctions. Whereupon the rank and file overruled the leaders.

Not that the rank and file of this conference represented any radical submerged tenth. The farmers were real "dirt farmers," inclined, as a delegate from Oklahoma put it, to "feel pretty gun-shy in a handsome place" like the Broherhood of Locomotive Engineers' auditorium. Most of the labor union representatives were comfortable-looking and gray-haired, obviously men of prominence in their communities. They stay at the best hotels, and plainly saw no reason why they should not be expected to do so.

Labor-union men in America, especially railroad-union men, are not so very different from other small townsmen. The surprising thing was that they had a calm conviction that they were the people who won the "radical" elections in the Middle West last month. If the small townsman turns against the old-party machines to elect La Follettes and Brookharts and Shipsteads and Wheelers something profound is happening in America. Indeed these comfortable Westerners had a contempt for Easterners who are still in an earlier stage. "In Montana," said Senator-elect Wheeler, "we have bankers who are more progressive than your workingmen in the East."

The real fight of the conference was on the question of "independent political action," which is a euphemism for a third party. Had the time come to break away from the old parties, or was there still hope of winning control of them? The Minnesota delegates, bursting with pride at their election of the first Farmer-Labor United States Senator, loudly proclaimed that they were sick and tired of fishing for favors from the old-party leaders. The Nonpartisans from Nebraska announced that they did not need a third party; they had indorsed and elected a Democratic Governor by 60,000 majority, and a Republican Senator by 70,000.

The delegates from the national Farmer-Labor Party insisted that the nonpartisan method meant concentration on one or two outstanding candidates to the detriment of the mass of the ticket and left the organization in machine control. A North Dakota farmer drawled that "Wall Street would control the old parties just as long as you leave them in Wall Street's hand. The thing to do is to take the parties away from them. Now, take our case," he said. "I'm a delegae to this conference. I'm also the chairman of the Republican Party of North Dakota." Whereupon the conference roared with laughter and cheered. Eventually, by a vote of 64 to 52, with the railroad vote a unit for nonpartisan action, the conference voted against a sweeping program of "independent political acion."

It might seem as if such a cautious conference had accomplished nothing. That would be a mistaken impression. It did not give birth to a new party, but until the railroadmen are ready to take the plunge there is little use in lesser groups breaking the traces. This conference did strengthen the cement which is binding together the farmers and workers of this country, and laying the foundation for a producer's party. There was no jealousy between farmers and city laborers. They had worked together in the last election and they intended to continue working together. The conference was one more experience in solidarity, imperfect but important.

It also helped lessen the old gap between the foreign-born workers of the East and the American-born workers of the West. Time and again Morris Hillquit's keen mind found the tactical solution in an hour of stress, and the railroadmen who had always hated and feared this Jewish Socialist gave him an ovation when he left. When Edward Keating of Colorado, attempting to stifle all resolutions from the floor, recommended non-adoption of a protest against President Harding's project of registering aliens Charney Vladeck swept the conference into unanimity by a plea which began 'My accent is foreign; my appearance is foreign; I don't know how I can appeal to you.'"

The ice is breaking. American politics is losing its rigidity. But politics never stay long in flux. If these men dally too long politics will crystallize again, and there will once more be two dummy parties, Tweedledum and Tweedledee, neither one with an economic program and neither with any real interest in the producers. If La Follette and the railroadmen wait until after the Republican primaries to crystallize their forces, they may discover that the bricks have been stolen while they were meditating what to build."

New York Day-by-Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—On a stage about as large as a dining room table I saw a Dadaistic opera the other night. The performance began at 2 a. m. and was brought from—wait, let me see the programme—Vienna. This Dada stuff is as far over my head as the Woolworth building towers above Shorty, Broadway's pet messenger.

The scenery was on rolls and when a new scene was wanted, Johnny turned the crank. It looked as though a couple of drunken painters had a fight with their buckets. By my, how the audience applauded—especially Ethel Barrymore.

The play opened with a trick Pagliacco swept by a passionate love. He ran around in his night shirt and spied a sizzling blond who had a mole on her shoulder. Evidently the mole got him for when he saw it he had an epileptic siezure.

Then came a dompteuse song with the star as a dompteuse. Of course, you know what a dompteuse is. You don't? And so many night schools. Well, anyway, she domped a couple of tueses and that was about all there was to that.

Johnny turned the crank and they slipped into a Chinese romance. A lute rang out, two girls wearing false faces that covered their body appeared. Then came the groom and the ceremony was performed. Suddenly the sweet little bride turned into such a raving fury that all beat a hasty retreat. It looked as if it was going to be rough.

But instead the scene changed and there was presented The Dance of the Tones with a musical poem by Debussy. Never go out of your way to see a Tone dance. There is nothing to it—just a waving of hands. Personally I prefer Primrose and West in a buck and wing.

Hark! Now came the Dadaistic Gavotte. All seemed to have broken arches and merely dragged their feet. One died. Another was stricken with cholera morbus or something and that's that. O, entrancing thats! Marvelous thats.

Going out Everett Shinn inquired: "Did you get it?"

"No, but I will when I get home," I replied. It was 4 A. M. and I promised to be home at midnight.

Broadway, by the way, is a strange, silent street around four o'clock in the morning. Somehow the silence seems loaded—you expect a piercing shriek or the quick report of a pistol. There was a Main Street touch near the Hotel Astor. On one of the cement traffic islands a shepherd dog was asleep on a subway grating—a warm spot. The only show of life was in the one-armed eateries where men with collars turned up and hats pulled down were gulping coffee and sinkers. I was fascinated by the hurried manner they employed in eating, but when they drift out to the sidewalk they don't seem to have an objective point. Perhaps it is habit. In the old days they used to lounge around waiting for saloons to open. No there's no place to go.

The most excitement was to be found in a dark side street. Some night cabmen had built a bonfire and were galloping the dominoes on the asphalt. They grew so noisy at times that there was danger of disturbing the policemen's sleep.

One of the dramatic critics suggests that New York theatres have a Coughing Section for those who punctuate the drama with lusty outbursts. The best cure can be directed from the stage. The star in a rather talky play was interrupted so frequently the other night by coughing that he walked to the footlights and asked those who were guilty to kindly step out to the box office and get their money back. He returned to his part and there was a deadly silence throughout the remainder of the play.

Cronin served seventeen months as a rifleman in the American army in France.

WALT MASON

THE GREATEST BOON

"If I had health not fame nor wealth nor grandeur could allure me," said Hiram Hick, "but I am sick and all the docs can't cure me. A dark green taste like rancid paste is in my mouth forever; I'm growing worse, say doc and nurse, in spite of their endeavor. One thing alone is fit to own," sighed Hiram, heavy-hearted; "I speak of health; and now by stealth that blessing has departed." This Hiram Hick was pretty slick at raking in the plunder; by day and night he used to fight, and tramped his rivals under. In marts of trade his wad he made, and would not rest a minute; "I can't afford to rest," he roared, "there is no profit in it." And then one day his strength gave way, the dcotros gathered round him, and he was packed in ice, nerve wracked, and rules of diet bound him. And now he's prone to talk and moan about his bygone blunders; "Health is," he cries, "our noblest prize, the greatest of all wonders. Of what avail are heaps of kale if one has got bone spavin, if he must spend long hours on end at rubbing beeswax salve in? A cheap john game is human fame if one has got lumbago, and has to drink some bitters pink, and live on bran and sago. Good health's a graft at which I laughted when I was chasing riches; now I'm half dead and in my head the sawbones sewed nine stitches.'

WORDS of WISE MEN

When suspicion creeps in at the back door confidence walks out at the front.

Endurance is the child of determination and the parent of success.

Sympathy steps into the shadow to lead the sorrower into the sunshine.

Courage consists not in hazarding without fear, but in being resolutely-minded in a just cause.

Beware of flattery, 'tis a flowery weed
Which oft offends the very idol
Whose shrine it would perfume.
—Fenton.

It is the peculiar faculty of fools to discern the faults of others at the same time that they forget their own.

We are never so ridiculous from the habits we have as from those we affect to have.

Five minutes spent in thinking how to do things right often saves hours of lamentation over things done wrong.

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing, leave behind us
Footprints in the sands of time.

"GHOST HOUSE" NOW UNTENANTED; WOMAN STARVES WITH MONEY IN HOUSE, BLIND SISTER MAY DIE

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—The Ghost House of the Bronx is untenanted today, even by a spectre.

One of its two occupants for forty years, Miss Losinde Christensen, 75, lies dead in the morgue; the other, her blind sister, Amelia, 82, is near death from prolonged hunger. The younger sister had starved to death in the house of mystery with $375 in jars and vases about her.

Scores of curious folk today visited the "Ghost House" a two story frame structure battered by wind and rain for half a century and surrounded by thick underbrush and tattered trees.

The sisters were taken out of the house in which they secluded themselves when they came from Denmark long ago, for the first time in years, after Amelia called the attention of the police by faint tappings on a window after her sister had died.

To the children of the neighborhood they had long been known "witches" because their habit calling to the outside world by this same tapping, and then vanishing into the dark recesses of the house.

When the door was broken in by the police, the house was found disordered, chilly, a remnant of a once prosperous and comfortable home.

The story of the aged women, perhaps concealing shattered romance of long ago, is unknown to any person save the surviving sister, now too weak to speak.

Miss Caroline Wagner Gamble, eldest daughter of Mrs. Samuel Gamble, 811 Walnut-st, was united in marriage Thursday afternoon, at 1.30 o'clock, to Mr George Alvin Ritnour, of Wichita Falls, Texas, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Ritnour, of South Solon, O.

The ceremony was performed in the home of the bride's mother, in the presence of the immediate relatives, with the Rev. Paul Saleste officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Homer Neer, of Springfield, were the attendants.

For the occasion the bride was costumed in a gown of dark blue plaited georgette, simply made, with bead trimmings. Her corsage was of Brides roses, calla lillies and narcissi.

Mrs. Neer wore a becoming frock of dark blue Canton crepe and a corsage of pink roses.

At 6 o'clock, Mr and Mrs. Ritnour were honored with a wedding dinner served in the Gamble home. An artistic color scheme of pink and white was effectively carried out in the decorations. Bouquets of pink and white roses formed the center table decorations, where covers were placed for twenty.

The bride is widely known and admired in this city where she enjoys a host of friends. For the past two and one-half years she has been engaged as millinery saleslady in the Edward Wren company at Springfield. Mr. Ritnour is manager of the Omar Oil & Gas company at Wichita Falls.

Mr Ritnour and his bride left last evening for a several days' visit with relatives in Columbus, South Solon and Springfield. They expect to start Sunday for Witchita Falls, where they will make their home.

given them a dollar.

"The trouble with employers today is they give too much thot to the profits they hope to make, to the repair of a leak in the roof of one of their buildings, perhaps, or to some other less essential—and not enough to the welfare of the people who made their success possible.

"It has been my experience that if employes are treated fairly if their rights are given consideration they will do the fair thing by you in return I have never had a strike among the many people I have employed because they all knew I did not regard them merely as beasts of burden but men and women who have feelings just as others have, who are part of our community. In this view my wife always agreed with me and it was she who suggested many of the things which have been done for those who were in my employ.

"Other business men thruout the country may not follow our example, but it has been demonstrated to our satisfaction it is the right course We have shown the way to others. If they follow there will be less labor unrest and dis satisfaction in this country."

FEAR CIVIL WAR IF GERMANY COERCED

Berlin Woman Writer Lectures In England, Warning Of Economic Straits

CAN'T RULE HUNGRY FOLK

Town And Country Population Would Be Arrayed Against Each Other, She Says

LONDON, Dec. 29—"I believe that if the Allies pursue a brutal, coercive policy toward Germany civil war in that country cannot possibly be averted. A hungry people will not adhere to any government."

Dr. Alice Salomon, head of the Social Study School, in Berlin, and a prominett German writer on social questions, who has just completed a lecture tour in England, gave this as her considered opinion in an interview with International News Service.

"Conditions in Germany among lower and middle-class families were appalling. Children were half fed and half clothed, and the necessity of buying a pair of boots in such families was a calamity," said Dr. Salomon.

"Thousands of young girls are solving the problem of making a living by going into domestic service in Holland, where they can earn as much as the highest-paid Cabinet Minister in Germany.

"In my opinion serious riots are inevitable among the working classes throuot the winter, and if the Allies continue to press for payment, civil war must beget chaos.

"If civil war comes," continued Dr. Salomon, "it will resolve itself into a vast struggle between the town and country areas, for the vast rural population will certainly refuse provisions to the industrial areas, and the towns would be overrun within a few weeks, and nothing could prevent the war spreading to the frontiers, to the imminent danger of the small border States."

In conclusion Dr. Salomon said that the notion of Germany striving against the stazilization of the mark is a ridiculous theory. The vast majority of the German people are longing to see the mark stabilized, for they believe that the longer the crisis is delayed the worse it will be.

MERGER OF FIVE VAN SWERINGEN ROADS PLANNED

CLEVELAND, Dec. 29.—Plans were being made today to submit to the stockholders of the five Van Sweringen railroads a proposal to consolidate all into one system, as approved by the boards of directors of the railroads meeting here yesterday.

The merger, if consummated, will put under one management approximately 1,700 miles of trackage, and would take the official name of the Nickel Plate Railroad, chief factor in the merger, the proper name of which is the New York, Chicago & St. Louis R. R.

Other railroads in the merger plan are the Lake Erie & Western; the Toledo, St. Louis & Western (Clover Leaf;) the Ft. Wayne, Cincinnati & Louisville, and the Chicago & State Line.

Nothing further was announced regarding the proposed acquisition of the Chesapeake & Ohio by the Van Sweringen interests.

GUNMAN ON STAND SAYS ACCOMPLICE SHOT PATROLMAN

COLUMBUS, Dec. 29. — That Peter Long, alias Big Bill, member of a quartet of Cleveland gunmen fired the shot that killed G. P. Koehler, policeman, is the assertion made on the witness stand by Stanley Forbes, being tried on the charge of first degree murder, accused of killing Koehler.

The murder occurred in north High-st, when officers Koehler and Roscoe C. Friddle tried to arrest Forbes, Long, Loomie Cummins and Charles Mithoefer who were in a touring car stolen from a taxi driver in Cleveland.

Long was killed by a shot fired by Officer Friddle. Forbes testified that Long did not shoot until after Officer Friddle began firing. He denied that he told Cummins he shot both Koehler and Friddle, declaring Cummins misunderstood him, and that he was telling what Long had told him.

Sixth St. Theatre

"FOLLOW ME" TONIGHT

"Follow Me,' declared to be the greatest colored show in the world since "Williams and Walker," will be at the Sixth-st Theatre tonight. Fifty singers, dancers and vaudeville stars make up the clever production. Critics claim the attraction superior in presentation with song and dance. One of the country's leading critics says:

"The act that two of the race's best comedians, in the persons of Billy Higgins and Clifford Rose, are featured will give reason to believe the claims of the producers and managers that the comedy end of this attraction is 100 per cent right, and a peek at the line-up of principals, in which such names as Ernest R. Whitman, Alice Gorgas, Bob Bramlett, Susie Sutton, the popular Leggitt Sisters, Iola Young, the Follow Me Harmony Four and others appear, is one of the finest recommendations for a fast working and up-to-the-minute evening's entertainments that could be desired.

There is also a pretty and sweet singing chorus of high calibre in support of the cast named above and the quartet is different from the regulation production four in that they can sing and they do so, with fine effect. The entire group is drilled to the final notch, the ensembles being done with a swift action that leaves no chance for the customary waits. There are sixteen scenes in the two big acts and the settings are all new and attractive.

The costuming is fresh and nifty, the music beautiful, and there are many novel eelctrical and scenic effects, including a rain and snow storm which is vividly realistic. There is, as usual, a light comedy story running thruout the piece with just enough seriousness in well-developed spots to hold interest.

DEFENDS MALE'S RIGHT TO END ENGAGEMENT

Mrs. Margaret Sanger, Advocate Of Birth Control, Flays British Argument

Better To Break Before Than After Marriage; Man Must Be In Love With Girl

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 28—"Women have claimed and won equality with men before the law. They should grant men the same privilege of breaking the engagement that they have claimed and used."

That is the way Mrs. Margaret Sanger, birth control advocate, answered Marjorie Bowen famous British novelist, who recently declared that men should be required to keep marriage engagements and women should retain the right, under law, to sue for breach of promise damages.

Mrs. Sanger fired her answering broadside at the British writer while here to lecture before the Women's Congress of Syracuse.

"It is far better to break before than after marriage," warned Mrs. Sanger. "It is of the utmost importance for both that the man be madly in love with the girl. If he changes his mind or if he learns that he has ceased to care both are happier if he breaks it off. So far as legal action is concerned, I fail to see why the man should not have the same privilege that women frequently exercise. It hurts a woman's vanity—ujst that—to lose her fiance. It would hurt her far more to seek divorce.

"Women have claimed and won equality with men before the law. They should grant men the same privilege of breaking the engagement that they have claimed and used.

"Happiness in marriage depends far more on the man's love for the woman than on the woman's love for the man. Unless each step forward in their love-lives is earnestly desired by both the marriage is doomed.

"Marriage should be a consummation of mutual desire. As for forcing a man to marry—that is ridiculous and almost impossible. Marriage calls for the highest mutual love, and love cannot be forced. You can't legislate it into existence."

B. DREYFUS IS ENCYCLOPEDIA OF BASEBALL

Owner of Pittsburgh Club Has Marvelous Memory —Seems To Know All Players

KEEPS CARD INDEX

No Bush Leaguer Too Remote For Penetrating Eye Of Diamond Solomon

NEW YORK, Dec. 28—As unique a character as the administrative side of major league baseball has known is Barney, the plausible, Dreyfus, owner of the Pittsburgh ball club. Other magnates may keep in reasonably close touch with the game and its developments; Barney grabs it in both of his self-starting hands and carries it with him always. To some baseball may be a hobby or a business. To Barney it is both and more—it is his life.

Mention a Class D ball player of the most obscure type—Barney will know him intimately from batting weakness to his choice in neckties. If he doesn't he will go to an index system he keeps in his office, select a card, glance at the hieroglyphics known only to himself and tell you everything pronto.

"Let's see," he will say. "Oh, yes! Goofus—first name Joe. He was born in Medicine Hat, runs a taxicab in the winter, bats and throws left handed and prefers blondes. That boy will be a ball player some day, if he can overcome a tendency to go after a high fast ball on the inside. Yes, yes, I know him. His father runs a cloak and suit business in Fort Wayne, Indiana, and once ran for Mayor on the Non-Partisan ticket, his opponent having a plurality of 40,000. The boy himself has freckles all over his nose."

The card index system is only the halter or check-rein upon a marvelous memory, however. Most of the time Barney's performance is strictly impromptu.

At the recent baseball meeting at Louisville Barney was approached by one Bill Jackson, a Three-I League manager, who wished to introduce himself. It wasn't necessary.

"I know you," quoth Mr. Dreyfus. "You played semi-pro baseball around Pittsburgh for some time, and then you knocked around the minors for a while. Then you got a job in the Federal League. You were a left-handed pitcher, but when you were with the Feds you played part of the time at first base."

According to Jackson, this data was accurate from first to last. The really remarkable feature, however, was that Jackson played semi-pro baseball around Pittsburg a mere matter of twenty years ago. Yet Dreyfus remembered just as you would remember the breakfast order you gave this morning.

Barney does not crave popularity—which is just as well. He doesn't get it. But he does command and receive respect, and, regardless of whether he may spoil ball clubs by too much management of managers, he knows more baseball in a minute than some magnates will know in a lifetime.

ASQUITH MAY BE NEW AMBASSADOR TO UNITED STATES

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Former Premier Herbert H. Asquith may succeed Sir Auckland Geddes as British ambassador to Washington, the Daily Express reported today.

Belief is growing that the United States will extend her participation in European affairs.

The Daily Sketch interprets President Harding's letter to Senator Lodge in these words:

"President Harding has definite plans for America's active participation in European affairs on condition European finances are stabilized thru settlement of the reparations problem."

LAV'ND'R MANIA REVEALED IN QUEER WILL

Los Angeles Woman Wanted To Be Buried With All Orchid And Lavender Clothes

NON-COMPLIERS ARE WARNED

Asked That Handbag and Paper Sack Marked "Private" Be Put In Her Grave

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 29—What is declared to be one of the strangest wills ever filed for probate in Southern California has been brot to light in Los Angeles. The will is that of the late Elena Stanislaus J. Wolfskill Hulburt. Its terms indicated that the testatrix was fascinated by purple and lavender colors.

Mrs. Hulburt's will, which was for less than $10,000, gave minute details as to how she wanted to be buried and made the unique request that various personal effects of purple and lavender be interred with her or burned in a heap.

"If whoever this concerns does not do it they will regret it!" was one passage in the document.

Later it was learned that the requests of the will were not carried out because of the fact that she was buried before the contents of the will were known.

That part of the will pertaining to the burial of the decedent read as follows:

"I wish to be buried in my dark purple plaid skirt, my wisteria waist with the sailor collar and my purple jersey sport coat. I wish to have all my artificial bouquets, violets, orchids and all or any one of them that are purple or lavender or orchid buried with me. I wish that all my personal clothes—dress skirts, all of them, waists, ribbons, handkerchiefs, kimonos, stockings, slippers and my old red silk kimono and all my writing papers, envelopes and correspondence cards, scarfs, bags, purses, anything of mine that is purple or lavender or orchid, or any of those shades, to be burned—burned in a pile. If whoever this concerns does not do it they will regret it!

"When I am laid away I wish you to put me away wearing my purple amethyst ring, pin, chain and amethyst pendant and other amethyst pin that are in my blanket I use for my pillow. I wish you to inter with me a purple silk bag with contents unopened, also an envelope like those from dry goods stores that is marked private—I wish these to be buried with me—and for no one to open them. These are my last wishes."

High intensity of light is provided by a new arc lamp for motion picture projectors that has its positive carbon in a horizontal position with its crater end pointing at the lens.

RUSSIAN ACTOR LIVES PARTS IN PLAYS

Olga Chekhova, Wife Of Late Playwright, Says This Is Reason For Greatness

DOESN'T PLAY TO AUDIENCE

Elaborate Property Carried To Give Realism To Plays Roils Stage Hands

PARIS, Dec. 29—"Russian art and literature are at the cross roads. Nobody knows which direction they are going to take." This is the opinion of Olga Chekhova, widow of Anton Chekhova, the Russian playwright. "Naturally the revolution has released many art and literary tendencies, the existence of which were scarcely suspected a few years ago."

It was behind the scenes of the Champs Elysees Theatre that I met Madame Chekhova, during the performance of Gorki's play, "The Depths." I asked this actress, as famous in Russia as her husband is known to the rest of the world, what is the secret of the Russian theatre's talented cast. Altho they understood not a word of the language, dozens of American tourists in the audience, between the acts, were proclaiming this performance of a Russian play the most realistically acted piece they had ever seen.

DON'T PLAY OUTWARD

"Most actors play outward," Madame Chekhova explained. "Most actors play to a greater or lesser extent to the audience. We play to each other. The audience doesn't exist for us. There is no difference or distinction between a rehearsal and a public performance. We study our roles, the characters, and study them for months before we start on the play. We study the psychology of the character we are to play until we can live the part, until we know that character so well that we know what the person would do in any situation that might arise—until we could live that character off the stage as well as on it."

I looked at Madame Chekhova's tattered red skirt, which she wears in "The Depths." "Isn't it dangerous to live a part to that extent?" I asked. "How many times have you played in this role you have tonight?"

"Perhaps four hundred," she replied.

"Living a part so thoroly and so often, aren't you afraid you'll be affected by it, become sort of tattered and torn mentally and spiritually?" I asked.

Madame Chekhova's pleasant eyes twinkled. "It's art, you must remember," she replied. "I don't believe it would affect an artist. But, you see, a theatre conducted on our plan cannot produce every play. The 'factory output,' as I like to describe the plays turned out in a hurry for some particular actress or stage, would almost never be suitable for the intensive work we put into a production.

STRESS REALISM

"We must have works which reflect real, vivid, throbbing life. Most plays written for a star cannot be said to fill this demand. The facts and truths of life are subordinated to the needs of the star or of the theatre. That is why authors who create works which will live never think of particular actors while they are writing."

"But the world believes that your husband wrote 'The Cherry Orchard' for you," I objected.

"He didn't even know what role I would play when he wrote 'The Cherry Orchard'," Chekhova replied.

"It's a thoroly intrenched tradition," I said.

Madame Chekhova blushed a trifle behind her rosy make-up. She shrugged her shoulders. Evidently she doesn't dislike the tradition, even if it does conflict with her theories of the best method of writing plays which are literature.

"Perhaps," she smiled.

"Have you noticed that we carry with us actual art treasures, antiques which thrill the Paris connoisseurs?" Madame Chekhova continued. "Every property used on the stage must have a significance to the actor. They must become treasured possessions, old friends, so that the actor will feel toward them as he would to his possessions off the stage." Madame Chekhova's call for the third act came, and she left her dressing room.

"Yes, she's right; but this realism in properties can go too far," grumbled one of the stage managers, as he directed me back to the front of the theatre.

"Let me show you something. I'll show you realism for a traveling company. It's what you Americans call takes the—takes the—I used to live in New York, you know—takes the biscuit. There's realism. We've lugged those all the way from Moscow and must cart them back again."

He pointed to ten full-sized church bells mounted in a portable belfry.

GERMANS TO ASK MODIFICATION OF VERSAILLES PACT

BERLIN, Dec. 29.—The financial angle of the reparations memorandum which Germany expects to hand to the allies in Paris next Tuesday was said today to embrace the following:

1—A combination foreign and internal loan guaranteed by German industry, agriculture and banks under certain conditions.

2—A reduction of the total amount of indemity Germany is still to pay.

3—A moratorium for several years.

4—Modification of the terms of the Versailles treaty pertaining to Germany's debt.

PRISONER KILLS SELF WITH KNIFE

KENTON, Ohio, Dec. 29.—The body of a man giving the name of Charles Harvey, 45, of Crestline, is held here by authorities today, following his suicide in the city prison last night as Chief of Police Sheldon prepared to take him to court for a sanity test. Harvey slashed his throat with a pocket knife. He had been arrested when he persisted in standing on the Big Four track in the path of a train.

FLORIDA IDEAL FOR CITRUS FRUIT LAND

No Commercial Fertilizer Is Needed, Says Expert Who Uses Seaweed

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 29—To make the native soil of Florida entirely suitable for the growing of citrus fruits not only dust of commercial fertilizer need be used, according to Charles T. Simpson, of Little River. Mr. Simpson has been conducting experiments on his Little River farm, six miles from here, for the past eight years.

The only fertilizer that Mr. Simpson has used has been the so-called seaweed. Once a year this expert with plants brings loads of seaweed from the waterfront, mulching the grove, and declares this is absolutely the only fertilizer that is necessary.

On the strength of his experience he declares that he is inclined to believe that seaweed is a most splendid fertilizer. His trees are weighted to the ground with fine fruit, yet the mulch he uses, he says, is not a true seaweed but a couple of little plant-like grasses which grow on the bottom of Biscayne Bay. These plants are loosened by fish that feed on tiny bulbs at their roots and float to the surface and are washed to the shore.

He is conducting other experiments with the candle-nut, which has a commercially valuable meat when it is freed from its shell. At present the nut is like an enlarged hickory nut with a fine kernel, which, however, sticks to the shell even worse than does the meat of the Brazil nut. An effort is being made to raise trees from selected seeds which have freer kernels.

gone thru the dry enforcement barriers on the Jersey coast. A huge volume also has entered thru the Canadian border.

Official reports of enforcement officials in Maine declared that on several days last week, smugglers brot in as high as 5,000 cases a day, thru the bootleg routes of New England, to help supply the liquor demand further south.

Reports today declared the smugglers are operating more boldly in the south Atlantic territory and are effecting safe landings of wet goods in Florida and Georgia and along the Carolina coast. A steady stream of fresh liquor supplies is said to be on its way from Bermuda and Cuba intended for the New Year trade.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Way Madge Found Rest So Far as Claire Is Concerned.

IF I had needed proof of Claire Foster's essential indifference to Dicky, I was given an abundance of it when within ten minutes of our going to bed, her regular and deep breathing told me that she had gone to sleep as peacefully as a kitten.

I knew, of course, that she was exhausted with the emotional strain of the preceding hours, but I knew, also, that no exhaustion would have permitted sleep to come to her so suddenly if her affections had been involved.

She is not the type of girl to take things lightly. Under her apparent hardness, her metallic superficiality, I had found a warm, ingenuous heart. And I realized that once she was certain of my continued presence in the room with her she had relaxed, had laid down the bristling armor which she had kept between herself and the captious speculations of those surrounding her, and had found the rest she so sorely needed.

But I could not find sleep so easily. I forced myself to lie quietly, for fear that restless movement might awaken the girl on the couch across the room, while over me went wave after wave of anger at Dicky, fear that he was no longer mine for either anger or approbation, longing for him, and an agonized, remorseful questioning as to my share of the blame in the rift that had come between us.

Happy, indeed, should be the wife who never has had such a vigil. In the old Scriptural phrase she should count herself "blessed among women" if she never has had occasion to spend the silent hours of the night in torturing introspection and retrospection such as came to me in that mountain bedroom.

A Sleepless Night.

At first I kept looking at the radium-luminous hands of my wrist-watch to time the passing minutes. But when I found that what seemed to me at least an hour of waiting was registered on the watch as only seventeen minutes, I determined to look at it no more. But I could not escape the striking of a clock in another part of the building, not strident, indeed soft-toned, but clearly audible in the deep silence which gave the hours and half hours.

I noted every one until four strokes told me it was that hour in the morning. Then I must have dozed off from sheer exhaustion, for when I opened my eyes again the darkness had gone and I saw that it was the time in the morning just before the sun comes up, when everything seems most bleak.

I shivered beneath the coverings, and realized that the room had grown cold. On the foot of my bed was a heavy comforter given me by Mrs. Barker for extra cold, and another lay at the foot of Claire Foster's bed. I slipped out of bed, crossed to her, and pulled the quilt up over her without waking her. Then I dived into my own bed again, shivering violently, until the extra warmth afforded by the added quilt restored physical comfort to me.

But it could not restore sleep to my eyes. I realized that I was "up for all day," realized, also, that action of some sort was imperative for me. I would never be able to carry my undertaking to its conclusion if I did not provide my jangled nerves with some outlet.

"Here's a Telegram—"

I am a mountain devotee. I do not know that any of my ancestors were mountain-bred, but I am sure that somewhere in the distant past of former existences I lived among mountains and loved them dearly. With a little thrill I realized that if I hurried I would be able to see the sun burst out from behind them, and I sprang noiselessly out of bed, hurried frantically through my dressing, and tip-toed out into the hall. If anything could calm me and give me strength to go on, I knew that the peace of the "eternal hills" would do it.

No one was astir in the front part of the house, although I knew, of course, that the day must have begun for Mrs. Barker some time before. I drew back the bolt of the hall door, shut it carefully behind me, and ran lightly down the path to the winding road which lay beneath the house and the dancing mountain brook.

I could have seen the sunrise from the veranda of the house, but I was afraid that some other autumn and mountain lover might come out and discover me there, so I walked swiftly up the road a few yards to a little knoll topped by a magnificent pine tree, reaching it just in time to see the sunrise I coveted.

I was permitted to enjoy it but a minute, however. There were quick footsteps behind me, and an old man's voice accosted me.

"Mis' Barker says you're Mis' Graham," he said. "If you be, here's a telegram which just come over at the station for ye. I happened to be there, and the agent said I'd better bring it up."

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of 18 and a senior in high school.

Three years ago I started going with a young man five years my senior. He is a very good, clean man. He respected me, and was very nice to me.

About one year ago I started going with another young man three years my senior. He also was very good to me.

I was to be his bride in two years. I was true to him, and gave up my first friend for him. The last two months he has changed. He says he still loves me, yet he acts as if he doesn't care whether I am within one hundred miles. He never speaks of our future home, although that used to be all he talked about. He had a date the other night which made me feel very badly.

If you were in my place would you give up this second young man or wait and see what the future brings? Shall I go back to the first one? He still wants me to come back.

I know the first young man loves me, but I do not know what to do about the second, for I love him and him only, and don't know whether or not he loves me. VERA J.

VERA J.: Have a frank talk with the young man to whom you are engaged. This is your privilege. Ask him just how matters stand. But don't become engaged to any one simply to have attention, my dear. It is too serious a promise to make for that.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

We are two girl chums, 17 and 18 years old. One of us has a friend [illegible] years old whom she dearly loves, but he does not seem to care much for her. He takes her out sometimes, but does not seem to be much in love. What can she do to find out whether he loves her?

For myself, I went with a man for seven months. He is 21 years old. Now he is away, and although he seemed to be greatly in love with me, he does not even write to me, but inquires of some of my friends about me.

Please tell me how to proceed to win his love back.

Should I write to him and ask why he does not write or come to see me?

BOBBIE and BLUE EYES.

BOBBIE and BLUE EYES: There is nothing you can do to find out whether the young men love you, my dears. You will just have to wait for them to make the advances. If you wrote or asked them why they are not more interested you would appear forward.

...nie Laurie will welcome letters of ...iry on subjects of feminine interest ...n young women readers of this paper ... will reply to them in these columns ...ters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

Significant Incidents in the Lives of Famous Women

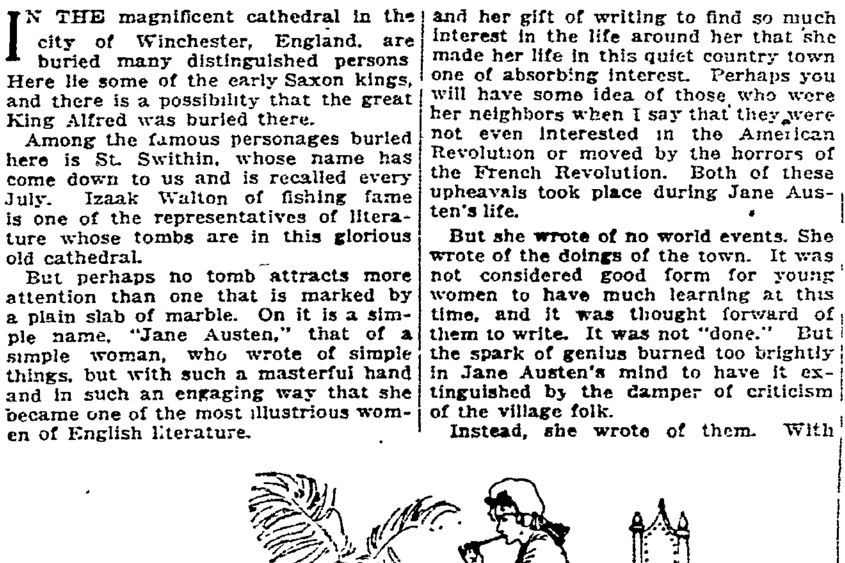
By MARK STUYVESANT

How Jane Austen Became a Great Novelist.

IN THE magnificent cathedral in the city of Winchester, England, are buried many distinguished persons. Here lie some of the early Saxon kings, and there is a possibility that the great King Alfred was buried there.

Among the famous personages buried here is St. Swithin, whose name has come down to us and is recalled every July. Izaak Walton of fishing fame is one of the representatives of literature whose tombs are in this glorious old cathedral.

But perhaps no tomb attracts more attention than one that is marked by a plain slab of marble. On it is a simple name, "Jane Austen," that of a simple woman, who wrote of simple things, but with such a masterful hand and in such an engaging way that she became one of the most illustrious women of English literature.



She Wrote of the Doings of the Town.

Of Jane Austen, Sir Walter Scott said: "That young lady has a talent for describing the involvements of feeling and characters of ordinary life which to me is the most wonderful I ever met with. The big bow-wow strain I can do myself like any now going, but the exquisite touch which renders ordinary commonplace things and characters interesting from the truth of the description and the sentiment, is denied me."

Jane Austen, the author of "Persuasion," "Pride and Prejudice," "Sense and Sensibility," and other novels, was born in 1775, near London. Her father was a clergyman of the church of England, stationed in the small town of Steventon.

Jane was brought up and lived in the narrow circle of this small place, in the most monotonous and strictest fashion.

But she managed by her imagination and her gift of writing to find so much interest in the life around her that she made her life in this quiet country town one of absorbing interest. Perhaps you will have some idea of those who were her neighbors when I say that they were not even interested in the American Revolution or moved by the horrors of the French Revolution. Both of these upheavals took place during Jane Austen's life.

But she wrote of no world events. She wrote of the doings of the town. It was not considered good form for young women to have much learning at this time, and it was thought forward of them to write. It was not "done." But the spark of genius burned too brightly in Jane Austen's mind to have it extinguished by the damper of criticism of the village folk.

Instead, she wrote of them. With her sweet stories she wove from the threads of life around her one of the finest word fabrics of English literature.

And this she did while life went on serenely about her. She was not vain about her writing. She wrote because she loved to write.

Her first manuscript lay for eleven years before she made any attempt to publish it. She could have been the fashion in London as the great woman writer of her day. The King, George IV., invited her to dedicate one of her novels to him.

But this simple woman declined what we would now call "publicity," and lived her quiet, uneventful life for only forty-two years. She started to write when a girl in her teens, but before her pen was laid down for the last time she had given to English literature some of its best-loved books.

Do You Know the Big Secrets of Successful Mending?

THE old saying that a hole is an accident of a day, but a patch is premeditated poverty, loses its significance in the present age of thrift and the revival of numerous old-fashioned needle arts. Patching and darning are now taught as a branch of household art in women's schools.

Mending in its highest development has long been taught and practised by the women of France, who are expert menders. They frequently use a strand of human hair in the work when they fail to find thread or floss fine enough and they excel in lace mending.

There is an instance on record of a French needlewoman who found a rose in the pattern of a fine damask tablecloth worn thin, and breaking away, so she inserted a petal from an old bit of damask, then embroidered the flower, repeating the work in the other three corners, thus making a lovely cloth and strengthening the worn spot so that it was quite as good as new. This is real thrift.

In mending table linen, threads drawn from old linen are best to use. If the breaks are too small for a patch, strengthen the place with a darning stitch, running the threads surrounding the break to a distance sufficient to protect the weak spot as well as possible.

If a patch is inevitable, lay the piece to be inserted under the hole, making sure that the threads run the same way, and baste it neatly in position, then turn in the lips of the tear neatly and sew down the edges with as fine and careful stitches as possible. Next, turn the cloth on the other side and trim the patch neatly, then ravel the edge a little before turning it under. The raveling makes the turn-under softer. Now, sew down the patch with a little stitch on the right side and a longer one underneath. This is the best that can be done, and after laundering, it does not look badly for common wear. Oftentimes, a dollie or dish may be used to cover the spot. When the cloth gives out on the edge of the table, it is cheaper to make a centrepiece of the top and napkins of the rest, for it is impossible to mend a long, thin place so that it will not show.

If crash towels wear out in the middle, use the ends for wash-cloths, finishing the edges with a buttonhole stitching or narrow, crocheted scallops. Ravages of moths on men's clothing, today, are corrected by shops that take matching pieces of the material, ravel them and weave in the spots so that they are scarcely discernable and the suit need not be discarded. Home mending, even the finest, can hardly compete with this new method, which is not unduly expensive, considering the work.

In mending baby things or shirtwaists, a fine piece of footing may be set under the thin place, or small tear, and then the darning may be done with a very fine thread, using the net as a foundation. If carefully done, the work will not show badly and the net is very strong. Men's shirts are so reasonable in price nowadays that it hardly pays to do much mending on them, though some women, who have plenty of time and patience insist on putting on new neckbands and reversing the French cuffs.

Almost everybody has her own particular way of mending stockings, but in families where the men and boys wear the guaranteed kind, which wear an unbelievable length of time without repairs, the work is materially lessened. Silk stockings can be mended only with fine, soft silk floss, and even this shows if not hidden by skirt or shoe.

In darning the ordinary stocking or sock, slip it onto the hand, straighten the edges of the hole and draw it together, trim off the irregular bits, run a darning thread around the hole, then plaid it neatly and evenly. This method makes a thin and smooth darn that holds well and does not hurt the foot. It catches every side of the hole evenly, stops the course of running threads and makes the place firm.

Buttonholes that have not been worked deeply enough may have the edges neatly trimmed off, and after running a firm thread around the entire hole to keep the material from slipping, the edge may be buttonholed again, taking a deeper hold in the material. This work should be done as soon as the trouble is discovered, before the goods have commenced to pull away badly, especially if the material is likely to ravel.

Torn or broken embroidery may be mended by putting a bit of net underneath and darning it down neatly with small stitches on the heavy edges.

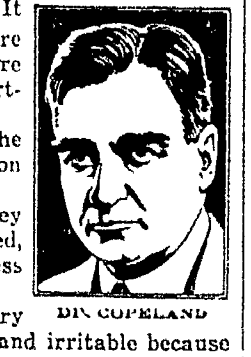
YOUR HEALTH

What Heartburn Is and What You Can Do for It

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Commissioner of Health, New York City

U. S. Senator-Elect from New York State



DR. COPELAND

LOTS of folks have trouble with the stomach. It may take the form of pain—stomachache—or there may be nausea and vomiting. In other cases there is a disagreeable symptom, commonly called "heartburn."

Heartburn is the name given the burning in the stomach and the gulping up of food and gas coming on an hour or so after eating.

All these symptoms are signs of indigestion. They do not necessarily indicate serious disease. Indeed, they may show nothing more than undue sensitiveness of the lining membrane of the stomach.

This portion of your anatomy is just like every other part of the body. It may get sore and tender and irritable because you have abused yourself by late hours, over-eating, over-drinking, overwork, loss of sleep or worry.

These nerves of ours get on edge if we neglect to care for them. When once they are upset there is no knowing where the symptoms will strike. The lining of the stomach has its network of nerves and blood-vessels. When this structure is disturbed then heartburn may be expected as one of the forms of nature's protest.

Whenever I get tired or worried I have heartburn at once. When your digestion fails—no matter how little—don't neglect to correct your wrong habits.

I have said frequently that the time will come when we will be ashamed of sickness. For too often sickness indicates neglect. We are ashamed of a neighbor who lets his house grow shabby or permits the gate to swing on one hinge. What shall we say of ourselves if we overlook the needs of the body and grow sick through neglect?

Of course, heartburn may be the sign of real hyperacidity, due to habitual wrong eating or to constipation. Certain foods do not agree, and their use is followed by gas formation and belching.

I think it is safe to say that at least half the population suffers from chronic constipation. Unless the bowels function promptly and uninterruptedly there is sure to be excessive acidity of the secretions, indigestion and sleeplessness.

Perhaps the chief cause of heartburn is the stomach disturbance due to imperfect or delayed intestinal action. To have a movement daily proves nothing. It may mean that the waste of food eaten several days before is being evacuated. Unless there is prompt and regular action your body is sure to suffer. Heartburn is a sure sign of some physical failure, and this particular symptom is very likely to be a prominent feature of the breakdown.

Carelessness in diet is fundamental to stomach disturbance. There is amazing ignorance on the part of thousands about how and what to eat. Too many schools teach everything except how to live. Nothing is more vital than knowledge of food values, food combinations, food incompatibilities and the proper preparation of food.

Appetite is a terrible master. You start out fully determined to resist the yearnings of the stomach, but at the crack of appetite's whip you meekly yield. Heartburn is nature's gentle rebuke.

Nature will bear with you for a time, doing nothing worse than giving you this little pinch. But watch out! She won't be so considerate after a while. Kidney disease, ulcer of the stomach and even worse ailments are awaiting you.

My advice is, remove the causes of your heartburn and bring your body back to health and vigor without delay.

Answers to Health Questions

E. M. B. Q—Will you please tell me what causes a furred, painful tongue? Do you think smoking is harmful in this case and what would you advise me to do?

A—This mouth condition may be due to tobacco, decayed teeth, pyorrhea, infection, acid stomach or constipation. Use Dobell's solution—which any druggist will prepare for you—one part to three of water, as a mouth wash, and correct the cause of the condition when found. For instructions on the treatment of acidity, restate your question and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

B. S. Q—I am a man 49 years old and for the past three months I have had a sharp pain in my chest. Kindly tell me what causes this and what to do for it.

• • •

MISS R. M. Q—Is there anything I can do to quiet my nerves without harming my system? I am often called upon to speak in public, but I become very nervous and excited and my arms shake.

2—Kindly advise me about ——.

A—You should overcome this nervousness by building up your general health. To do this, you should eat good, nourishing food, exercise regularly and systematically, practice deep breathing, be out-of-doors as much as possible, drink an abundance of water between meals and also drink milk and cream, bathe frequently and get regular hours of sleep in a well-ventilated room.

2—I cannot advise you about the preparation you mention, as I do not know anything about it.

J. McM. Q—Two months ago I sprained my ankle and had same attended to. Although the bone was not broken and I can walk very well, it has not as yet attained its normal shape. Will you kindly advise me what is best to do?

A—It would be advisable for you to have an X-ray taken of your ankle to determine the underlying cause of the swelling, then proper treatment can be prescribed.

• • •

MRS. F. B. S. Q—Would it be harmful to use nitric acid to remove moles on the face?

A—Yes, this would be harmful. Moles can be safely removed only by the electric needle in the hands of an expert.

M. G. B. Q—I was in an accident and had a bone chipped in the joint of my knee. This happened about eight weeks ago. Will you please tell me whether it should be healed and whether I will be crippled from it?

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Describes a Quaintly Charming, Bouffant, Brown Evening Frock.

"DO you like bouffant dresses?" Pam asked me.

"It depends on the dress, of course," I answered, "and a lot, too, on the person who wears it."

"Some persons don't look well at all in bouffant things," she agreed. "I think bouffant skirts suit the slim figure best."

"Yes," I agreed, "and along with that slimness it's better if the wearer has, or can achieve a certain quality of quaintness."

"How can a person look quaint if she really isn't, though?" Pam asked.

"Why, the dress itself has much to do with her general air," I said. "Then it influences, too, the way she does her hair, whether she wears earrings or not, and choice of accessories for the costume."

"Yes," Pam agreed, "of course, the frock influences the air of the wearer just as it rules its accessories."

"Now, I saw an adorable costume at one of the smart after-the-theatre dance places that illustrates what I mean," I told her.

"Did it suit the wearer exactly?" she asked.

"Yes," I answered. "I've seen the same girl before, and everything she wears suits her exactly."

"One of those fortunates who know how to choose their clothes, and how to wear them," Pam murmured.

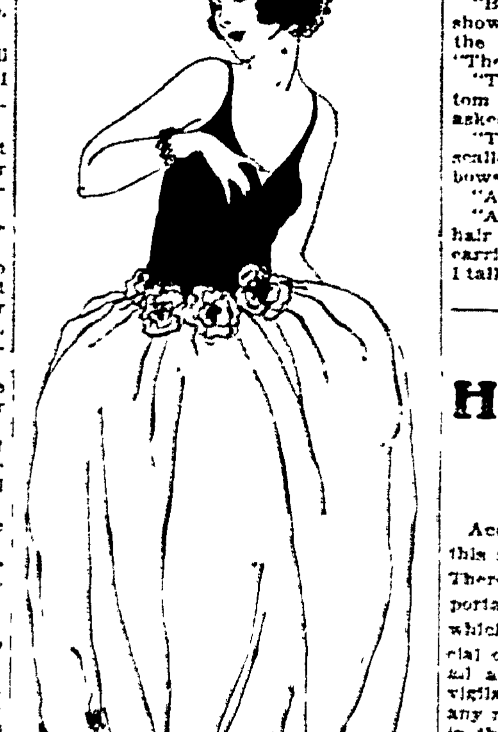
"Sometimes she changes her type a bit, but she knows how to do it," I explained. "She is stunning in sports clothes, and she was equally stunning in this bouffant frock."

"Of course, you couldn't expect her to wear bouffant things for sports," Pam interrupted, facetiously.

"It was brown," I said, ignoring her.

"Which is very new and very smart for evening," Pam supplied.

"And it combined two materials," I said. "The slim bodice was velvet and the bouffant skirt was taffeta, looped a bit at the sides and dropping almost to the floor."



Velvet and Taffeta Combine in This Lovely Evening Gown.

"It sounds lovely," Pam commented.

I sketched as I talked. "The bodice was V-necked, and had slender straps over the shoulders," I explained.

"What are those flowers you are drawing about the girdle?" Pam asked.

"Brown taffeta, lined with pink, which showed just a little where the edges of the petals curled over," I told her. "The centres were pink."

"That's a novel treatment at the bottom of the skirt. What is it?" Pam asked.

"The taffeta was folded up, caught in scallops, and held there by tiny brown bows," I explained.

"Adorable!" Pam commented.

"And more so because she wore her hair parted in the middle and amber earrings," I said, sketching them in as I talked.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

FRIDAY, DEC. 29.

According to the lunar government, this should be a day of stirring events. There is prospect of a sudden and important change, removal or journey, which should bring benefit if the financial operations be wisely controlled, and all avenues for fraud or deception be vigilantly checkmated. Speculation of any nature may prove hazardous. Those in the employment of others are under excellent planetary augury for recognition or promotion if undeniably deserving.

Those whose birthday it is have the forecast of an active year, with benefits through change or travel. They should avoid speculation and all danger of fraud or deception involving money loss. The best success may come to those in the employment of others. A child born on this day will be clever, original and enterprising, but may be extravagant unless carefully trained in economy.

Good Night Stories

By Blanch Silver

SIPPY SQUIRREL DOES HIS NEIGHBORS A GOOD TURN.

WELL, when Sippy Squirrel moved into the hole in the apple tree, every one sat up and took notice, for Sippy Squirrel was the noisiest fellow the orchard folks had ever heard.

He chattered the first thing in the morning, and he chattered all day long, and when night came, somewhere in the woods you could still hear Sippy chattering to himself.

"I surely wish he had not rented that apartment," growled Mrs. Tree-Toad to her neighbor, Mrs. Chipmunk. "Why, in all the years we've lived in this orchard I've never heard such carrying-on."

"Just what I was thinking myself," snapped old Mrs. Wild Duck.

"Well, I know what I'd do if I lived here," Father Wild Duck said. "I'd see that the saucy thing moved somewhere else. Does he always chatter like this?"

"From morning to night," replied Mrs. Tree-Toad.

"The fact is, I'd say," grunted Mrs. Chipmunk, "some one should speak to him. Then if he didn't stop, I'd see that he moved."

"Not a bad idea," piped up another voice, and Sippy Squirrel himself hopped down on a branch near the ground. He had been over their heads all the time, and had heard every word that his neighbors had said. "I'm very sorry if I have been too noisy, but I love this orchard, and I can't help being happy. I'll move this very day." And away he bounded to his doorway, packed his belongings and moved.

Although the orchard folks hated to admit it, they missed his merry chatter. The place soon grew dull and Mr. and Mrs. Wild Duck took to their wings and started on their way. They had not gone far when they ran across Sippy Squirrel. Instead of being cross with them, he treated them finely, and invited them to stay in that part of the woods.

Mr. and Mrs. Wild Duck liked the location, and settled down to stay awhile and rest. Sippy Squirrel showed them over the country.

One morning, while they were out looking around, Sippy Squirrel ran up a tree and out on a limb and began chattering wildly. Mr. and Mrs. Wild Duck, frightened at the tone of his voice, sat very quiet among the weeds. Sippy Squirrel chattered to himself until his voice was hoarse. Then he dropped to the ground and ran in the opposite direction, chattering at the top of his voice.

Just then Mr. and Mrs. Wild Duck saw a great, big bird-dog chasing after him. Sippy Squirrel ran until he knew the dog was at a safe distance from his visitors, then he scaled a tree, and the dog ran on.

When Sippy Squirrel returned he found Mr. and Mrs. Wild Duck still hiding.

"Well, well, Sippy Squirrel," quacked Mrs. Wild Duck, "you certainly saved our lives. I'm sorry we made fun of you."

They flew right back to the orchard and told Mrs. Tree-Toad and Mrs. Chipmunk. So Sippy Squirrel was invited back to live in the orchard, and there he has lived from that day to this. There you'll find him, the best friend the birds have in that part of the country.

REPUBLICANS

But three Democratic senators were regarded as sure to vote for its rejection—Senators Shields, Tennessee; Reed, Missouri, and Walsh, Massachusetts.

Senators Underwood, Alabama, the Democratic leader, and Hitchcock, Nebraska, ranking minority member of the senate foreign relations committee were among several Democrats who displayed a lack of enthusiasm regarding it.

The lineup of Republicans for it, showed Senator Borah, Idaho; McNary, Oregon; Norbeck, South Dakota, Brookhart, Iowa; Ladd, North Dakota; Stanfield, Oregon; Capper, Kansas; Norris, Nebraska; France, Maryland; Couzens, Michigan, with the possibility of Norris and one or two others dropping out

While admitting the vote would probably be close, Senator Lodge and his colleagues predicted they would command a majority sufficient to defeat the proposal They said they were well satisfied with the situation

Their plan was to force its defeat and the passage of the navy appropriation without it no later than tomorrow so the senate might adjourn over the New Year holidays until Tuesday.

per cent; brick 50 per cent; cement 15 per cent; leather 20 per cent; sugar 45 per cent; meats about 5 per cent.

The only declines of outstanding importance recorded by the census bureau were seven per cent in bituminous coal and 47 per cent in anthracite caused by the strikes last summer.

The seven per cent reduction in soft coal production under the figure for 1921 resulted in a decrease of 26,000,000 tons due to a strike of five months last summer.

The anthracite decrease aggregated 40,000,000 tons.

Agricultural receipts were reported as generally higher during 1922 as compared with the preceding year.

The increase in production coupled with a reduction in immigration improved the labor situation from a large surplus of labor at the end of 1921 to a point where shortages now occur while unemployment has been almost eliminated

Transportation conditions in 1922 changed from a big surplus of idle freight cars to a considerable shortage, while car loadings were eleven per cent greater than in 1921—this despite the shopmen's strike.

Prices received by farmers increased approximately 17 per cent during the year, wholesale prices advanced ten per cent and retail food prices declined five per cent This condition the department stated, "gives the farmer a greater purchasing power and narrows the margin between wholesaler and retailer."

The heavier volume of trade during 1922 was indicated by an increase of six per cent in the sales of mail order houses and a gain of 13 per cent in the business of chain stores. Debits and bank clearings showed about the same relation.

Fifty per cent more passenger automobiles were manufactured in 1922 compared with 1921, and about 75 per cent more trucks

Discussing the government's financial operations during the year, it was stated that the total United States interest-bearing debt was reduced by $667,000,000 or about three per cent during the twelve months ending December 1, liberty and victory loans were reduced by $2,153,000,000 or about 11 per cent.

The federal reserve board finds the year ending with continued upward trend in the entire trade field.

Heavier spending during the holidays was reflected in an increase of $157,000,000 in federal reserve notes in circulation.

Larger demand for bank credit in the interior during recent weeks was accompanied by liquidation of both loans and investments in New York and Boston. The demand for bank funds was most pronounced in Cleveland, Richmond, St. Louis and San Francisco.

The volume of payments by check, or ordinarily taken by the reserve board as a measure of business turnover, increased slightly except at Atlanta.

The Monmotor was due to arrive in New York today from southern ports. A wireless dispatch early this afternoon indicated the Kickapoo which was standing by was trying to transfer the crew

THURSDAY'S GALE CAUSED BIG LOSS IN LAKE REGION

CLEVELAND, Dec. 29 — Cleveland and northern Ohio were today counting the cost of the season's worst storm, which laid out interurban traffic and telegraph and telephone communication over a wide stretch of territory.

The Ohio Bell Telephone Co. estimated the cost of the storm to be not less than $300,000, while the Western Union Telegraph Co. said that their loss would probably reach $50,000.

The Postal Telegraph Co. was damaged also, but not so heavily.

Railroad and street car service was again reported normal today.

financial or in goods," continued Snowden. "Payment of huge financial indemnity by Germany is impossible, while payment of goods would be fatal to Britain's industries and the economic recovery in Europe.

"If we are able to remove from Germany the overhanging fear that we intend to impose the collection of vast unnamed amounts of indemnities then we should immediately restore the inclination to work, and we could take the first great step towards international trade recovery.

"I do not believe the American inquiry would lead to any further facts than those already known, but I entirely sympathize with the general attitude of the United States toward Europe. It would be mine if I were an American.

"I am hopeful of the results of the Paris meeting next week. I do not believe the British will be able to present any plan which the French will accept. Also I am certain that their opinion would not countenance vast monetary payments by Germany to France which would immediately be used up in building additional armaments and which might be accompanied by further occupation of German soil by French troops.

"One solution of the present crisis is that the United States take over the administration of Central Europe or that it should be left to the league of nations."

MURDER RESULT OF BOOTLEGGER FEUD, POLICE BELIEVE

CLEVELAND, Dec. 29.—Andrew Valunt, 32, proprietor of a soft drink place in Oregon-av, was summoned from his bed early today by unidentified men to receive a Christmas present.

Two hours later, his wife, alarmed at his continued absence found his body in the rear of their home. The skull had been crushed.

Police today are working on the theory that his killing was the result of a bootlegger's feud, which is said to have been progress for some time.

Valunt had twice been convicted of violation of the liquor laws, and information by detectives is to the effect that the murdered man was lined up with one of the factions which is said to control the illicit traffic in liquor in Cleveland.

A boarder, who had made his home with the Valunt's until ordered to leave a week ago, was also being sought.

NEGRO DESCRIBES MURDER, LURING WOMAN TO CELLAR

Husband Is Prostrated; Attacker Is Indicted, Trial Set For Jan. 4

ORANGE, N. J., Dec. 29.—"Famous Jersey justice," swift and sure, today cast its sinister shadow on the quivering form of William E. Battles, 19-year-old negro whose confession and indictment for first degree murder followed within nineteen hours the discovery of the body of his victim, Mrs. Charles F. Brigham, kindly little housewife, mother of three children, strangled to death in the basement of her home, after outrage by the brutal negro.

Judge Steckel, to whom the true bill was handed following hurry up action by the grand jury toady, set January 4 for the trial which it is believed will take only a few hours.

Battles, in his confession said he enticed Mrs. Brigham into the basement by pretending he had fallen and injured himself on the stairs. The woman died in heroic defense of her honor, while her three little children, ill with measles and diphtheria, slept in an upstairs room.

The negro had been employed for the day to assist in cleaning windows. The slain woman's husband was today prostrated by uncontrollable grief.

FEAR OF

members at Spyker held a solemn meeting Sunday night at the command of the Exalted Cyclops. Some thirty or forty members met in the stillness of the Louisiana darkness and set fire to their robes and all other evidence that might show they ever were connected with the Klan. Letters, records, books—all went up in smoke to prevent evidence in what promises to be one of the most sensational probes in the history of the country.

Spyker is the home of T. J. Burnett the first man to be arrested on the charge of murder in connection with the outrage of last summer and is a veritable hotbed of Klan activities. Burnett denied he is a member of the Klan. Klan members it is said have speculated on the possibility that mere membership would be cause for indictment as an accessory to the murders, provided it can be proven that Klan members had a part in the brutal assaults on Daniels and Richards.

Meanwhile Burnett shows very little concern over his predicament. He is depending upon the backing of the Invisible Empire, which he very obviously believes will come to him, either openly or under cover.

Until it is all over Skipworth refuses to make a statement. While Klansmen are reported to be destroying their robes, rumors have invaded every nook and corner of this parish that the state has obtained two or three complete confessions from participants in the kidnapping. A great many persons, believe the department of justice officers, know every man. If the confession really has been obtained the fact has not been made public. Everyone here agrees that Burnett is not a man who would break readily under grilling.

Residents say he has been in trouble before and added that he will not wilt or weaken in this event. On the other hand, these persons agree it would be practically impossible to implicate some forty men in a crime without some one talking.

Deputy Sheriff L. E. Calhoun, who left for the governor's office yesterday with a warrant calling for the arrest of Dr. B. M. McKoin, was reported today by Sheriff Carpenter to be well on his way to Baltimore after a conference with Gov. Parker.

While the defense is clamoring for immediate action, the state is making every effort to have the hearing postponed until the open hearing of January 5.

Attorney General Coco declares evidence will be disclosed here which will turn the strongest Klan sympathizers against that organization and thereby turn public opinion towards the state.

BONAR LAW'S PLAN FOR GERMAN AID O. K.'D BY CABINET

LONDON, Dec. 29—Premier A. Bonar Law's new reparations plan, reducing the amount of indemnity which Germany shall pay, was put up to the British cabinet today for its approval.

It was understood that the plan was approved and that it will be presented at the allied premiers' conference in Paris next week with few changes.

The Daily News said it understood that the main outlines of the British proposals were as follows:

1—German indemnity would be scaled down to a figure Germany is able to pay, with the most vigorous penalties in the event of default.

2—A moratorium for the next three or four years with reduced payments over a further brief period to assist Germany to recover industrially.

3—Germany to be offered favorable discount arrangements if she meets her obligations promptly.

4—Great Britain to accept German reparations bonds in payment of allied debts, possibly cancelling a portion of the debts.

5—France to agree to partial remission of the debts due her from her allies.

6—Fifty billions of gold marks (about $12,000,000,000) mentioned as probably the total reparations to be required of Germany.

British experts will put the finishing touches on the British plan tomorrow, and the premier will leave for Paris with it Monday.

Premier Bonar Law is hopeful that there will be a final solution of the indemnity issue before the end of next week. If not the British will either withdraw from continental affairs leaving France, Belgium and Italy to wrestle with Germany, or will seek assistance from the United States. In event of British withdrawal the French would enter the Ruhr district immediately.

CINCINNATI TO REDUCE POLICE FORCE AND SAVE

CINCINNATI, Dec. 29. — The most widespread transfer of police in forty years is contemplated, it was said in police circles today.

The number of lieutenants turnkeys and station house attendants are to be materially reduced in the outlying districts. In addition each officer will be required to take four days off each month.

All of this is being done to keep within the limited appropriation for the coming year, police officials say.

GIRL WIFE DOUBTS HUSBAND'S DEATH

Suicide Note Fails To Convince Her That "Dickey Boy" Is Lost To Her

COULDN'T SUPPORT HER

Runaway Bride, Daughter Of Rich Parents, Says He Was Good To Her

By KENNETH HARRIS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 29.—Despite the fact that Mrs. Richard B. Runyon, pretty 17-year-old bride and erstwhile high school student, has received a suicide note from her husband and that nothing has been heard of him since his sudden departure from his home here more than a month ago, she vehemently insists that her "Dickie Boy" is still alive. Her missing 20-year-old husband was a former student at Beloit College, Beloit, Wis. The youthful wife hails from "Sunny Tennessee."

In a two-page farewell letter, which Mrs. Runyon received from her husband shortly after his disappearance, he wrote: "I have perpetually deceived you since our marriage. I have been gambling, and I have lost all of my money—and my overcoat and hat to boot. And to think I was cad enough to tell you I had been winning!" the girl bride quoted her husband as saying.

Made Death Threat.

Continuing, she said the letter read: "I am tired of it all, and I am going to tie a weight around my body and jump into the river. By the time you get this I will be dead. Good-by!

"Your Worthless Husband."

This letter, which blasted the short romance of the youthful couple, was postmarked "Kansas City" and was received at the home of one of Runyon's friends, where the pair had rented rooms. Runyon eloped with his sweetheart from her home at Nashville, Tennessee, to Henderson, Kentucky. From there they came to this city, where the young bridegroom secured a position. He resigned this, however, after a short time.

"'Dickie Boy' was always so good to me," Mrs. Runyon explained to inquiries between sobs. "He treated me wonderfully kind. He told me before our marriage that he had had a nervous breakdown while attending college two years ago. I feel positive that he has suffered a relapse due to his former illness and has wandered off in a mental aberration.

Believes He Lives.

"I know that my husband is not dead. He will return to me as soon as his mental fog clears."

The child wife has abandoned her search for "Dickie Boy" for the present and has announced her intention of returning "home to mother" in the near future. Her father, E. C. Wright, is a well-known merchant at Nashville and is said to be wealthy. The daughter's elopement had been forgiven, and the new son-in-law had been graciously accepted as a member of the family, according to Mrs. Wright, who rushed here to assist her when she learned of Runyon's disappearance.

Felt Incompetence.

Runyon is understood to have felt keenly his inability to provide his wife with a home which would equal in comfort the one she had fled.

Neither the Missouri nor the "Kaw" river has been dragged for the missing body, and it is pointed out that the wife and her family place slight credence in the husband's suicide threat. On the other hand, it is believed, they are of the opinion that the youth had merely shouldered too much responsibility and after the realization struck him had decided to bury his identity for a time.

Police stated they would continue the search with unabated vigor.

PELHAM STOCK CO. DELIGHTS SCOUTS

The members of the Pelham Stock Co., now showing at a local theatre, presented "Catherine's Burglar," to the delight of the Boy Scouts at Camp Cantwell, south of this city, Friday afternoon.

Little Miss Catherine Pelham was one of the chief characters in the play.

At 7:30 o'clock this evening the court of honor will award badges to the scouts who have earned higher honors. Fifty tests will be made. Six have passed the tenderfoot tests.

Scout Commissioner C. K. Clemmens made a visit to Camp Cantwell Thursday. He said that the camp was in splendid condition and that the scouts should be proud of keeping such a sanitary and clean place.

The usual basketball and indoor baseball games were played at camp last night. Stunts were performed by the campers last evening.

Scout Executive Jack Hammill announced Friday that the Coshocton Boy Scouts camp, at Camp Cantwell compares favorably with any other camp in District 4.

Camp breaks up on Saturday.

SCHOONER LOST, STEAMER ASHORE OFF EAST COAST

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 29 — The steamer Santa Rosa of the Grace lines was ashore today off Charleston, S. C., with five tugs, the U. S. S. Carrabassett and the Coastguard cutter Yamacraw standing by.

The crew has been taken off but the disabled ship is stuck fast in the sands.

The schooner Maizie Peabody, last reported fifty miles off Old Point Comfort, is believed to be lost. The Peabody was enroute from Norfolk to Baltimore with a crew of four men.

BILLION CREDIT TO GERMANY PROPOSED BY N. MEX. SENATOR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—Extension of $1,000,000,000 in credits to Germany for the purchase of foodstuffs and raw materials in this country under direction of the secretary of the treasury was proposed in a bill introduced in the senate this afternoon by Senator Bursom, Republican, of New Mexico, a member of the farm bloc.

BENTON'S SLATE IS CLEAN SAYS JUDGE

CINCINNATI, Dec. 29 — Rube Benton, pitcher recently purchased by the Cincinnati National League club from St. Paul, returned to Cincinnati after a conference with Baseball Commissioner Landis at Chicago.

Benton conferred with Landis relative to the charges that he bet $1,500 on the 1919 world series. Benton, upon his return, said that Landis would report to President August Herrmann within a few days.

Landis already has declared that as far as his records show, Benton has a clean slate and can not see why he should be kept from the major leagues.

DAYTON MAN WOULD ACCEPT BETTER JOB

CINCINNATI, Dec. 29.—That he would consider it a high honor and would be glad to come to Cincinnati was the statement attributed to Haveth E. Mau, prosecuting attorney of Dayton, Ohio, when told that he is being pushed for the federal district attorneyship here.

Mau is spending several days with friends here and said his presence has nothing to do with his candidacy for the post.

LEGACIES LEFT TO COLLEGES ARE NOT TAXABLE IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, Dec. 29—Legacies to colleges, or universities, are not subject to the collateral inheritance tax in Ohio. This ruling was announced today by the state supreme court upholding a similar judgment of the Hamilton-co common pleas court.

The supreme court reversed the appellate court which had nullified the common pleas judgment in the case of the president and fellows of Harvard College et al. vs. the state.

Annie L. Dexter died February 25, 1916, leaving a residuary legacy of $73,479.97 to Harvard college. The probate court found the legacy subject to the tax and charged it with $3,673.95.
